

Telecommunications Industry

Jones Walker represents a range of businesses in the telecommunications industry, including domestic telecommunications service providers and communications and information technology service providers. Our clients include companies that produce computer software and hardware, provide computer services, manufacture consumer products, and manage media outlets.

Our work for clients in the telecommunications industry includes business and finance, corporate and securities, real estate, labor and employment, and tax matters. Our attorneys have represented clients in a variety of litigation, including class action defense and matters specific to the industry, such as equipment placement disputes. Telecommunications companies benefit from our “firm within a firm” structure, whereby focused practice groups work collaboratively to tackle the legal challenges our clients face. We can assemble teams of attorneys with specific experience in different practice areas, creating a formidable legal force to best serve our clients’ interests.