Judith Windhorst is a partner in the firm's Business & Commercial Litigation Practice Group, having joined Jones Walker's New Orleans office in 1989 after graduating from Harvard Law School. Ms. Windhorst's practice emphasizes a wide variety of complex litigation, including the defense class actions, toxic tort, products liability, and environmental claims. Her environmental practice includes wetlands permitting, defense of state and federal compliance orders and penalty notices, and regulatory hearings. She has considerable experience in complex electronic discovery proceedings.

As a trial lawyer, she has handled numerous disputes in a wide variety of practice areas: RICO, antitrust, securities litigation, ERISA, dealer distributor disputes, legal malpractice, fraud, and products liability. Ms. Windhorst's practice has also included a large cross section of industries and businesses: telecommunications and Internet equipment, chemicals, adhesives, paints, gaming, computer and electronics, waste water treatment, bus and rail transportation, shipyards, solid waste disposal, soft drinks, vacuum cleaners, garden and pet supply, and insurance. She also has extensive experience in the area of governmental relations and regulatory matters.
